STYLE (IF APPROPRIATE):

DESCRIPTION:

The three-story house located on the west side of Poppleton Street has a gable roof, three bays on the first story and two on the upper stories. The doorway, reached by marble steps, has a segmental arch and the ghost of a simple surround which is now missing. The tall narrow window openings on this story are boarded, but the sills are stone and the wood lintels have segmental arches. The upper story windows are missing. The openings are flat-arched. The third story openings are square and placed just below the corbeled brick cornice. Twin interior chimneys rise from the exposed north wall of the house.

SIGNIFICANCE:

AREA: Architecture                      LEVEL: Local

The early nineteenth century rowhouse form is well-illustrated by 102 North Poppleton. Although missing some elements and somewhat deteriorated, the house and its neighboring structures form an undefined potential historic district.
